JULY 2012

This mime workshop with less privileged children, was held at the Sanya Ashram BMS school in Mumbai.

This workshop was run in conjunction with the CHIP program, which is a service to upgrade the education standard of public schools. Presently, they are helping to improve 5 schools.

We found that this program was invaluable in helping the students learn to express themselves, create enthusiasm, gain self-confidence, and enhance their communication skills which are needed for so many facets of life.

Presenting certificates to the students.

Students actively involved in critiquing performances to find how to improve them.

We had a very fun and meaningful program with them. This workshop at the school was the first of its kind for us, so we were in 'learning mode' as one of our objectives is to introduce this course into the curriculum of schools throughout India.

Using hats to tell a story and build a character—Cowboy, Chinese, king, and cook

Our role would be to train the teachers and help to develop this program further. Want to be a part?

Learning about make up and how to build character and act out stories. Above: Clown and lion

Learning to use our body like a paint brush to tell a story.

Using drums and musical instruments to learn about rhythm and beat.
